Re:locate Global goes mobile with new App launch

Re:locate Global, the leading source of information, support and events for the global mobility sector, is thrilled to launch the new Re:locate Global App, now making it's content truly globally mobile, adding convenience for readers as well as value and extended reach for advertisers and sponsors.

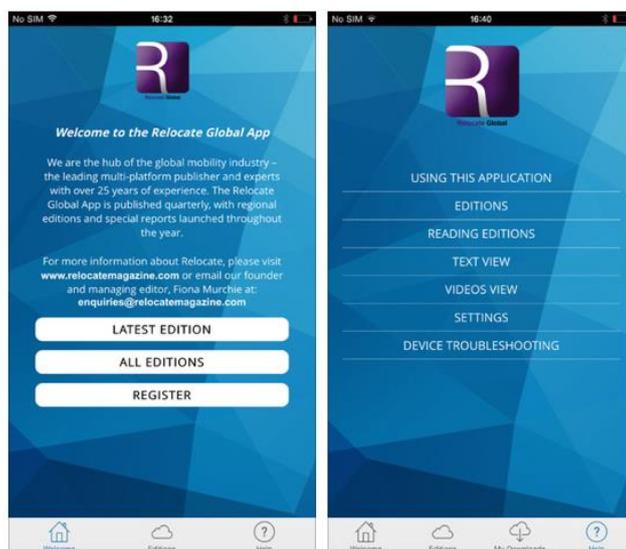

Busy HR & relocation professionals will now be able to access Re:locate magazine and the growing range of digital regional magazines, supplements, and guides while on the go. New publications and reports on industry sectors, countries as well as the 2015 edition of The Guide to International Education & Schools will soon all be featured on the new app.

Whether responsible for international assignments and business travellers, or managing an organisation going into new markets, it is now even easier to tap into the Re:locate Global community. Users of the free app can take advantage of a wealth of knowledge from experts around the world, and share in the conversations that support business growth for international organisations.

Fiona Murchie, Managing Editor of Re:locate, says: "The Re:locate Global app brings the magazine, digital editions and special reports to mobile devices, adding convenience for the international audience and value for the advertisers and sponsors.
